HONOLULU WILL WAR ON RATS

UNUSUAL NUMBER OF PNEUMONIA CASES

GAMBLERS DECLARE "VICTIM" WAS WINNER

Of the thirteen gamblers arrested yesterday for shooting craps in the Arlington hotel on Hotel street, four forfeited bail, seven pleaded guilty and were fined $9 and costs, one was committed to the circuit court for trial and one had his case continued until Saturday.

Jim Harrub, J. H. Powers, Tavares and J. W. Edwards decided that they would rather pay $10 than appear before Judge Andrade this morning.

William Cluney was fined $14 and costs as this is the second time that he has been arrested for having connections with a gambling game.

Edward Cluney was represented by Attorney Rawlin who asked that the case be set over until Saturday.

Joe de Ponte Ferraje, who made a statement to Chief McDuffie concerning the details of the game, waived examination and demanded a jury trial, by Attorney Lightfoot.

Joe Leal, one of the defendants, made the statement in court that young Ferraje had won money in the crap game in the Arlington and had gone over to the automobile stand on Alakea and Hotel streets and had lost his money there; also that he had been to Kerr's and purchased a bunch of glad rags.

It was erroneously intimated in yesterday's Star that former chief of detectives, A. P. Taylor, now reporting for the Advertiser, was doing police work for the Advertiser and was responsible for the prosecution of the men who today pleaded guilty to gambling. While Mr. Taylor's experience as chief of detectives adds to his value as a newspaper man, and while his cleverness as a newspaperman made him a success as a chief of detectives, the facts happen to be that he is not on the police "beat" and has had nothing to do with the arrest of Joe Leal or any of the other alleged gamblers. Mr. Taylor's reputation as an efficient chief of detectives led to the false impression that he was still "doing police" for the Advertiser, he having formerly been the chief agent in bringing certain notorious gamblers to justice, both as detective and newspaperman.

Young Ferraje, contrary to expectations, was not used as a witness against the alleged gamblers this morning. He is represented by Lightfoot and has demanded a jury trial.

Sam Paek, who has been watched by the police very carefully for the last few weeks, as he has been suspected of selling opium without a license, was found guilty and fined $50 and costs.

Tom Burns, who denies any relationship with the fighter who passed through here the other day, was sentenced to nine months imprisonment on a charge of vagrancy.

Wm. Kamakawiwoole, who owns one of the most ferocious dogs in Honolulu, was fined $13 for allowing the animal to run around the streets to the danger of other people. William says that he will shoot his dog if he gives any more trouble.

John Copeland, a sailor, was found guilty of assault and fined $10 and costs.

Eight young men from the vicinity of Moanalua charged with malicious injury had their cases continued until July 14.

SAUCY TO ANDRADE

"If you don't marry that man I will kill you with this razor."

Oscar Anderson in police court this morning was charged with using the above threatening language to his daughter.

Alma, his daughter, is at present resting in the room reserved for women at the police receiving station for being saucy to Judge Andrade this morning.

According to the police, who have been watching the young woman's movements for some time, the young girl is leading a life that has caused her father to take steps to stop her downward run. When Alma was searched this morning at the receiving desk some letters and circulars were found in her hand bag that are of a character impossible to publish.

A young man, who is a great friend of Alma's father, is very anxious to marry the comely young Alma, but all efforts to arrange a date for the wedding have proved fruitless.

Alma in court this morning adopted an air of independence that did not make an impression with the court, the result being an order to keep the young lady locked up until she was ready to say that she was sorry.

Anderson was released to appear next week to answer the charge of threat.

In view of the past behavior of Alma it is possible that she will decide to marry the young man who says that he is very much in love with her, rather than serve a term in the girls' industrial school.

TAKING PRECAUTIONS AGAINST POSSIBLE DEADLY SICKNESS

E. A. Mott-Smith, as President of the Board of Health, he being also Acting-Governor and Secretary of the Territory, is bringing to bear his authority for the annihilation of rats.

Honolulu ten years ago had an epidemic of bubonic plague, and since then great care has been exercised by the health authorities, though there have been sporadic cases.

It has been observed by the medical experts that cases of plague follow along after unusual numbers of cases of pneumonia, and the last two months have produced an unusual number of cases of pneumonia in this city.

During June there were twenty cases of pneumonia and during May there were sixteen or eighteen cases.

A Japanese body, posted last night, death having been attributed on the first examination to pneumonia, may develop to be a case of plague, though it is by no means certain, and there is no cause for alarm.

Nevertheless, the circumstances are such that the President of the Board of Health is taking every precaution against any possibility of plague, and particular attention is about to be paid to the annihilation of rats in this city, especially in the tenement district of King and Beretania streets, whereabouts the aforementioned suspicious case occurred.

ROOSEVELT, BRYAN AND RELIGION

Although unable to be present, Mr. Roosevelt remembered the world's missionary conference now in session at Edinburgh, and sent a letter endorsing the movement in the warmest terms. His sentiments were received with much enthusiasm.

Mr. Bryan is a delegate and present at the meeting. Presumably he too is in full sympathy with the business in hand, and disposed to assist in work not improperly described as gigantic.

Suppose these two men—let us say young men—should decide to retire from politics and devote the remainder of their days to this order of religious activity. Suppose they should announce that they had done their share, and had their fill, of labor in temporal fields, and henceforth would strive for the spiritual welfare of mankind. Would not the missionary cause be greatly assisted? Would not American contributions be materially increased in size? And American money contributions to any great cause are an important factor.

The religious spirit is strong in Mr. Bryan. In fact, some of his admirers, much as they admire him as a politician, are not so certain that he would not have been more attractive in the pulpit than he has been on the stump. His best lecture is on a religious subject, and in politics he leans strongly and even extremely to what are called the moral issues. On the question of the saloon he is far more preacher than party leader.

Although a church member and attendant, Mr. Roosevelt is not associated with the pulpit. He lacks equipment for the place. He has no oratorical graces, and while full of matter presents it unevenly as to form and clearness. But he is all ardor in any cause he embraces, and to a cause of such scope and purpose as the lifting of backward peoples to a higher plane of usefulness and enjoyment he would bring much inspiration.

These men began with small aims and have grown to big ones. It has been the other way in some other cases. In an appreciation of Carl Schurz it was pointed out that he had aimed when little more than a lad at reforming the governmental policies of the whole world, and closed his career contented with trying to reform the civil service of the United States. The young New York assemblyman of the early eighties, busy with the affairs of his district, has since served over seven years as President, and has attention everywhere for his views about international issues of the greatest moment, while the young lawyer of Lincoln of the early nine

INFORMAL RECEPTION

As a result of Captain Berger's kind offer to play from three to five this afternoon at the naval wharf, for the benefit of the cruisers Cleveland and Chattanooga, the wardroom officers of the Cleveland will entertain a few of their friends this afternoon at an informal reception on board the trim little warship.

No invitations have been issued for this function but all who come will be entertained as only naval officers know how to entertain. The quarter deck has been decorated with flags and plants and will serve as room for dancing late in the afternoon. Ice and other light refreshments will be served.

PROMETHEUS ON SUNDAY

Wireless communication will probably be established tonight with the collier Prometheus which is en route to Honolulu from San Francisco. The newest U. S. Naval collier left San Francisco on July 2 and should arrive here on or about July 10.

A quantity of stores for the naval stations are on board, which will probably delay the sailing of the two cruisers until about July 15 or 20.

The Prometheus will tow the Chattanooga, the two ships being conveyed by the Cleveland as far as San Francisco. The French cruiser Montcalm, due here on July 13, will take the berth now held by the Cleveland which will necessitate her either moving over to the Twa side of the naval dock alongside of the Chattanooga or going out to an anchorage.

Captain Rodman is uncertain about his future movements when his ship is placed out of commission, but it is very likely that he will be ordered to one of the big navy yards in the east, as he has been on sea duty for a number of years and is entitled to shore duty for at least two years.

Waiting for clients that never came, has since been for fourteen years the master of his party, and three times its candidate for the highest office in the land. Unusual men, both, and whatever they do there are many thousands who applaud.—Washington Star.
